

JUBILEE CORNER (Kent)

TQ 84 46

Jubilee Corner lies near Ulcombe in Kent and overlies well-drained clay soils (Aldridge 2005, 173). Excavations at the site began in 1994 and were funded by the Kent Archaeological Society (Aldridge 2005, 173). The archaeological investigations uncovered a Late Iron Age bloomery with six, contemporary cremation burials (Aldridge 2005). The cremations were set around, within the walls and inside the bloomery after it went out of use (Aldridge 2005, 176). The cremations were the only human remains recovered from this excavation at Jubilee Corner and Trevor Anderson and J. Andrews conducted the osteological analysis on the skeletal material.
