

ETONBURY FARM BUND (Bedfordshire)

TL 1954 3791

Etonbury Farm Bund lies near Arlesey, Bedfordshire close to the Rivers Hiz and Ivel on a slight slope (Saunders 2003, 2). Stripping and excavations by Heritage Network began in April 2002 and until May of the same year in advance of a new access road (Saunders 2003, 1). The archaeological investigation showed human activity in this area from the Late Bronze Age/Early Iron Age to the Roman period (Saunders 2002). Machine stripping of the site revealed many features as well as a single inhumation burial within an enclosure (Saunders 2003, 2). None of the other features were excavated apart from the inhumation and it is thought the layout of the site in conjunction with the inhumation represents a rural farmstead with a separate burial area (Saunders 2003, 8).
