Introduction	1
Material and Methods	5
1. Cetaceans and the North Atlantic Ocean	7
1.1. Origin and Evolution of Cetaceans.....	7
1.1.1. Marine Mammals.....	7
1.1.2. Phylogenetics.....	8
1.1.3. Evolution of Modern Cetaceans	9
1.2. The North Atlantic Ocean.....	10
1.2.1. Arctic Waters.....	11
1.2.2. Greater North Sea	12
1.2.3. Celtic Seas	12
1.2.4. Wider Atlantic.....	12
1.2.5. Bay of Biscay and Iberian Coast	12
1.2.6. Baltic Sea.....	13
1.3. Cetacean Species in the Northeast Atlantic	13
1.3.1. Parvorder Mysticeti	14
1.3.1.1. Family Balaenopteridae	14
1.3.1.2. Family Balaenidae	16
1.3.2. Parvorder Odontoceti.....	18
1.3.2.1. Family Physeteridae.....	18
1.3.2.2. Family Kogiidae.....	18
1.3.2.3. Family Ziphiidae.....	19
1.3.2.4. Family Delphinidae.....	20
1.3.2.5. Family Monodontidae.....	23
1.3.2.6. Family Phocoenidae.....	23
1.4. Cetaceans and Medieval Climate Variability.....	23
1.5. Strandings	25
1.6. Exploitable products.....	28
1.6.1. Meat	28
1.6.2. Baleen	30
1.6.3. Bone.....	31
1.6.4. Teeth and Ivory	32
1.6.5. Blubber and Oil.....	34
1.6.6. Spermaceti	35
1.6.7. Ambergris.....	35
1.7. Pre-whaling population size	37
2. Cetaceans in a Medieval Historical Context	39
2.1. Methods	39
2.2. Pre-Medieval and Medieval perception of cetaceans	40

2.3. Whaling People.....	43
2.3.1. Norse.....	43
2.3.2. Norse-Gaels/Hiberno-Norse.....	47
2.3.3. Normans.....	47
2.3.4. Danes.....	48
2.3.5. Sámi.....	48
2.3.6. Basques.....	49
2.3.7. Portuguese.....	50
2.3.8. Anglo-Saxons and the English.....	51
2.3.9. Flemish.....	53
2.3.10. Frisians.....	54
2.3.11. Dutch.....	55
2.3.12. Polish.....	56
2.4. Stranding Events in Historical Sources.....	56
2.5. Cetaceans, Status, and Diet.....	59
2.5.1. Ecclesiastical Diet.....	59
2.5.2. Noble Diet.....	61
2.5.3. Peasant Diet.....	63
2.6. Medieval Marine Resources Exploitation in Context.....	64
2.7. Conclusion.....	65
3. Cetaceans in Zooarchaeology.....	67
3.1. Taphonomy.....	67
3.2. Identification of Cetacean Remains.....	70
3.2.1. Ancient DNA (aDNA).....	70
3.2.2. Zooarchaeology by Mass Spectrometry (ZooMS).....	73
3.2.3. Trace Element Analysis (TEA).....	74
3.2.4. Organic Residue Analysis.....	75
3.2.5. Osteological Reference Collections.....	76
3.2.6. Osteological Reference Manual.....	77
3.3. Active whaling vs. Opportunistic Scavenging.....	78
3.3.1. Species Composition.....	79
3.3.2. Ethnographic Sources.....	80
3.3.3. Hunting Tools.....	82
3.3.4. Boats and Ships.....	83
3.4. Zooarchaeology, Cetaceans, and the interpretation of socioeconomic status.....	84
3.5. Conclusion.....	87
4. Zooarchaeological Research on Cetaceans from Medieval Northern and Western Europe.....	89
4.1. Methods.....	89
4.2. Results.....	90
4.2.1. Results: Species.....	90
4.2.2. Results: Skeletal elements.....	94
4.2.3. Results: Artefacts and Butchery.....	97
4.2.3.1. High Status Artefacts.....	99
4.2.3.2. Non-High-Status Artefacts.....	106
4.2.3.3. Other Artefacts.....	108
4.2.4. Results: Contexts, Status, and Trends.....	108
4.3. Conclusion.....	114
5. Case Studies.....	117
5.1. Netherlands and Flanders: Zooarchaeological Analysis of Medieval Cetacean Remains from the Netherlands and Flanders.....	117
Introduction.....	117
Historical context.....	117
Methodology.....	120
Results ZooMS.....	121

Results of morphological and osteometric analysis.....	123
Comparison to modern stranding data	126
Chronological results	128
Discussion.....	130
Conclusion	131
5.2. England: “The Exploitation of Sea-Mammals in Medieval England: Bones and their Social Context”:
>20 years on	132
Introduction.....	132

5.3. Grey whale (Eschrichtius robustus): Greys in Grey Literature: The Demise of the North Atlantic Grey
Whale (Eschrichtius robustus)	142
Introduction.....	142
Dispersal into the Atlantic	142
Material and methods	144
Results.....	144
Discussion.....	148
Distribution	148
Killer whale predation on Atlantic grey whale?	150
Active whaling or opportunistic scavenging.....	156
Conclusion	157
6. Social Implications of Cetacean Exploitation in Medieval Northern and Western Europe	159
