Mikindani's Geographic Context	9
Mikindani's Historical Context	10
Historical Records of Mikindani	10
Archaeological Work around Mikindani Bay Persistent Questions	11 12
3. Archaeological Methodologies of the Project	14
Defining a Study Region	14
Phase I: Excavations at Mikindani	15
Phase II: Archaeological Survey	15
Phase III: Selective Excavations at Recovered Sites	19
Excavations from Phase I and Phase III	20
Phase I	20
Phase III	31
4. Environment and the Historical Ecology of Mikindani	49
Regional Environmental Overview	49
Climate and the Indian Ocean Monsoon	49
Geology and Soil Chemistry	50
Vegetation and Local Fauna	51
Correlations with Microenvironments	52
Human Interaction with the Mikindani Environment Historical Evidence for the Indian Ocean	53
Transfer of Plant Foods	53
Archaeobotanical Evidence	53
Faunal Evidence	59
Human Impact on Soil Chemistry	62
Overview of Mikindani's Historical Ecology	67
Implications of Grain Macrobotanicals Implications of Results Regarding Forest	67
Resources	68
Implications of Faunal Remains Implications of Phytolith and Soil Chemistry	68
Results	69
Orientations to the Environment	69

5. Local Ceramics from the Mikindani Region	71
Methodology of Ceramic Analysis	72
Results of Quantitative Analysis
Overview of the Assemblages	74
Results Sorted by Site	74
Results Sorted by Period	79
Local Ceramic Typology	85
First Millennium Types	85
Early Second Millennium Types	86
Late Second Millennium Types	87
Discussion of Typology	87
Connections to Other Eastern African Assemblages	88
Comparisons Based on Attributes	88
Comparisons Based on Types	91
Results Sorted by Microenvironment	92
Refined Ceramic Periodisation of Mikindani Region	94
Implications of the Typology and Ceramic Analyses	96
6. Imported Goods and Interregional Trade at Mikindani	00
WIKINGAN	98
Imported Goods Commonly Found on the Swahili
Coast	98
Ceramics	98
Beads	100
