

Contents

List of figures	viii
List of tables.....	xi
Abbreviated references.....	xii
Abstract.....	xiii
Chapter 1. Introduction.....	1
1.1 Summary	1
1.2 Aims and objectives.....	1
1.3 The imported material: an overview	1
1.4 Historical background and period terminology	2
1.5 Outline	3
1.6 Methodology for data collection: Chapters 4, 5 and 6	3
Chapter 2. History of research.....	7
2.1 Introduction	7
2.2 Research on Late Antique imports to Britain and Ireland.....	7
2.2.1 Principal researchers	7
2.2.2 State of knowledge	10
2.3 Models of transmission: the character of the Insular assemblage and the search for Atlantic parallels	16
2.3.1 Raleigh Radford at Tintagel	16
2.3.2 Charles Thomas and Bernard Wailes	16
2.3.3 John Hayes' observations.....	19
2.3.4 Michael Fulford's model.....	21
2.3.5 Ewan Campbell's research.....	22
2.3.6 Additional considerations	24
2.3.7 The potential for new models	26
2.4 Conclusions	27
Chapter 3. Late Antique imported pottery on the Atlantic Seaboard: developments in research	29
3.1 Introduction	29
3.1.1 Issues of classification and terminology	29
3.2 Amphorae.....	29
3.2.1 History of research in Britain and Ireland	29
3.2.2 East Mediterranean amphorae.....	31
3.2.3 British and Irish examples of imported amphorae.....	33
3.2.4 North African amphorae: unravelling the 'Bv' classification	34
3.2.5 Iberian amphorae	38
3.2.6 Amphora contents	40
3.3 Finewares	40
3.3.1 Introduction.....	40
3.3.2 African Red Slip (ARS).....	41
3.3.3 Late Roman C (LRC).....	45
3.3.4 Late Roman D (LRD)	51
3.3.5 Dérivées des Sigillées Paléochrétiennes (DSP).....	52
3.4 E Ware	56
3.5 Other Materials	62
3.5.1 Coarsewares and unclassified ceramics	62
3.5.2 Glass	63
3.5.3 Miscellaneous materials.....	64
3.6 Summary	64

Chapter 4. Imported pottery in Britain and Ireland: new evidence and understandings	65
4.1 Introduction	65
4.2 Tintagel: reassessing the ceramic research	65
4.2.1 Tintagel: history of investigations	65
4.2.2 The Tintagel pottery: research prior to 1990	66
4.2.3 The Tintagel pottery: discussion of the imports reported from the 1990-99 excavations	67
4.2.4 Discussion and recommendations.....	69
4.3 Early medieval imports on the South Devon coast: a case-study for future directions in research	70
4.3.1 Introduction.....	70
4.3.2 Bantham.....	70
4.3.3 Mothecombe	77
4.3.4 High Peak, Sidmouth	81
4.3.5 An amphora recovered from Plymouth Sound	85
4.3.6 South Devon case study: discussion	87
4.4 Additional recent British discoveries.....	88
4.4.1 Pevensey Castle	88
4.4.2 Rhynie.....	89
4.4.3 Druce Farm, Dorset	89
4.5 Conclusions and directions in research	89
Chapter 5. Late Antique and early medieval pottery on the Atlantic Seaboard: the evidence from France	91
5.1 Introduction	91
5.2 Mediterranean imports to western France in Late Antiquity	91
5.2.1 Imported Mediterranean amphorae.....	91
5.2.2 Imported Mediterranean finewares	94
5.3 Case Study: ceramic imports to Bordeaux.....	95
5.3.1 Introduction.....	95
5.3.2 Saint-Seurin	96
5.3.3 Saint-Christoly	97
5.3.4 Place Camille-Jullian	97
5.3.5 Discussion.....	99
5.4 E ware: new evidence for production and distribution	100
5.4.1 Efforts to identify Continental parallels.....	100
5.4.2 Continental examples of E ware	101
5.4.3 The ‘enigma’ of the origin of E ware.....	103
5.4.4 E Ware: a product of Bordeaux?	114
5.4.5 E ware in Spain	115
5.5 Conclusions	115
Chapter 6. Ceramic imports to Atlantic Spain and Portugal in Late Antiquity	116
6.1 Introduction	116
6.2 Parallels for the British imports.....	116
6.2.1 Imported Mediterranean finewares in the Atlantic	116
6.2.2 East Mediterranean finewares (LRC and LRD).....	117
6.2.3 African Red Slip Ware (ARS).....	121
6.2.4 Imported Mediterranean amphorae.....	125
6.3 Regional case studies: sites with imported Mediterranean pottery in Atlantic Spain and Portugal.....	127
6.3.1 Southern and central Portugal.....	127
6.3.2 Northern Portugal and north-west Spain (Gallaecia – Galicia)	134
6.3.3 Northern Spain.....	147
6.4 Conclusions	149
Chapter 7. Discussion and conclusions: Britain in the Late Antique Atlantic	150
7.1 Introduction	150
7.2 Discussion: new models of contact and connection	150
7.2.1 Late Roman connections in the Atlantic	150
7.2.2 An Atlantic Network: new understandings of importation and connection in the late-fifth and sixth century	151
7.2.3 Vigo: an ‘Atlantic emporium’	154
7.2.4 The transformation and end of the Atlantic network	156

7.2.5 New models of Atlantic exchange	156
7.3 Future research and recommendations	159
7.4 Conclusions	160
Bibliography	161
Appendices.....	173
Appendix A: Concordance of ceramic terminology	173
Appendix B: Location maps (individually scaled)	176
Appendix C: ARS Chronology	183
Appendix D: Mothecombe ceramic data.....	187
Appendix E: High Peak ceramic data	188
Appendix F: Cawsand amphora	191
Appendix G: Quantities of amphorae from sites in South Devon, Tintagel and selected sites in south-west Britain	192
Appendix H: Ceramic distribution maps.....	193
Appendix I: Schematic/speculative maps of supply and exchange.....	204
Appendix J: E ware minimum vessel totals after Campbell 2011 and Doyle 2009	206
Appendix K: Atlantic sites with Mediterranean imports and DSPA (E ware totals shown from these sites) and Continental sites with E ware	208