The archaeology, epigraphy, art, and history of the Maya are increasingly studied throughout the world. As discoveries multiply, new venues of publication are a critical means of spreading knowledge both within and outside the field. The Archaeology of Maya sub-series from BAR publishes monographs, excavation reports and surveys on the Maya in an A4 (297 x 210mm) format that permits extensive illustration often lacking in smaller book formats. Conference proceedings and revised doctoral theses will also be considered, and Open Access publishing is available on request.

The BAR Digital Collection also offers a platform for innovative projects that include 3D modelling, video and audio. The series editors believe that books centred on archaeology, epigraphy or art should be well illustrated, and therefore encourage the inclusion of colour wherever appropriate. Contributions can be in English or Spanish or in any of the Mayan languages with English language or Spanish translations.
